Applicant is reminded of the proper language and format for an abstract of the disclosure.

The abstract should be in narrative form and generally limited to a single paragraph on a separate sheet within the range of 50 to 150 words. It is important that the abstract not exceed 150 words in length since the space provided for the abstract on the computer tape used by the printer is limited. The form and legal phraseology often used in patent claims, such as "means" and "said," should be avoided. The abstract should describe the disclosure sufficiently to assist readers in deciding whether there is a need for consulting the full patent text for details.

The language should be clear and concise and should not repeat information given in the title. It should avoid using phrases which can be implied, such as, "The disclosure concerns," "The disclosure defined by this invention," "The disclosure describes," etc.

The Abstract is too long and contains legal phraseology.

The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: The reference to claim 1 on the first page of the specification should be deleted, as the specification should not find its support in the claims.

Appropriate correction is required.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Leverett (U.S. Patent 5,677,516) in view of Ishii (U.S. Patent 5,901,854).

Leverett shows an apparatus 14 for sorting product having an endless conveyor chain 20, conveying units 35 located on the chain 20, at least two rolling elements 42, a connecting element 31 and a carrier element 52 arranged between the rolling elements

42. Also disclosed are inspection and weighing positions. Not disclosed is the carrier element as automatically returning to a conveying position. However, disclosed by Ishii is a spring 30 which automatically returns a carrier element 25 to a conveying position, see Figure 6. To include such an automatic return feature onto Leverett would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art as it would eliminate the need for a cam return device and help to maintain the carrier horizontal as it is conveyed.

Re claim 2, Ishii shows a leaf spring that is deflected only upon movement of the carrier between a rest position and a discharge position.

Re claim 3, the spring undergoes lateral and perpendicular deflections relative to the conveying direction, see Figure 9.

Re claim 4, Leverett shows raising guide means that cause product to be discharged.

Re claim 5, see the two hinged members in Figure 8.

Re claim 6, the elements are fixed in both a conveying position and a weighing position.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
